NGOs, volunteers reach out to feed city's hungry

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Bengaluru: As fear of hunger and starvation sets in among the economically underprivileged because of Covid-19, good Samaritans in the city are rising to the occasion.

Mercy Mission, a conglomerate of 17 NGOs in the city formed on March 19, has delivered around 9,000 food packets made in its five kitchens and 900 ration kits. It has a team of doctors and nurses that can help people in quarantine and stranded conditions. They have also kept a team ready to help with funerals.

From its kitchen at Palace Grounds, Jain International Trade Organisation gave two sets of meals to 14,000 people.

Abhyudaya that runs free learning centres in slums distributed 170 grocery kits and plans to give away 200 more.

However, some volunteers and NGOs are finding it difficult to procure goods. People were generous in contributing money. But to procure items in bulk was hard as everyone is running out of stock, said Rizwan Ahmed, community leader, Gubbachi Learning Centre.
